

Persecution, it is what it is.

Persecution comes in many forms and is ugly no matter how it happens.

On a personal note, my family in South Florida belong to Chabad and are Orthodox Jews. Needless to say, as wonderful as they are normally, they have excommunicated me from the family until I give up believing as I do and start listening to them who think I belong to a cult and and off my rocker.

My life is full of persecution of all kinds. But YHWH is #1 in my life and His Son Yashua is #1 in my life and anyone who wants to Love YHWH, Yashua and the Children of Israel (meaning all of the them), and prays for all of them and those that do not want to be part of the Children of Israel – They are my Joy along with the persecutions.

The lesson of persecution is simple – to see if you can Love YHWH no matter what happens to you in life. If you fail, you start to hate, get bitter and bitter and then you risk falling away from your Faith in the Kingdom of Heaven and all it offers.

My Desire is to have everyone in our congregation give their testimonies so everyone else Can appreciate the fact that we all have Good and Bad to open up about and then leave it to YHWH to take care of when we know we are too weak on our own to do so.
